

The only way America's voters can make fully informed decisions about their lives and their government is for a multiplicity of voices to be heard. Increasing the ability of companies to own multiple media outlets within a market limits the marketplace of ideas. That is the most important market we have.

Do not weaken the rules against multiple ownership of media outlets. To do so while Americans are focusing on the war against terrorism is cowardly. Don't try to sneak this out the back door.